

County Compensation by Industry: New England Region

■ The New England region accounted for 6 percent of the nation's total compensation in 2009. Of the 167 counties in the nation with at least $10 billion in total compensation, 12 were in the New England region and accounted for 73 percent of the region's total compensation.

In the New England region in 2009:

- Total compensation declined in 59 of 67 counties. The largest contraction occurred in Nantucket County, Massachusetts at -10.5 percent, while the largest growth occurred in Grand Isle County, Vermont at 6.6 percent.
- Declines in finance and insurance, durable-goods manufacturing, and construction were the largest contributors to the contraction in total compensation.
- Metropolitan county compensation declined in 29 of 34 counties. The largest contraction occurred in Fairfield County, Connecticut at -6.7 percent, while the largest growth occurred in Grand Isle County, Vermont. Non-metropolitan county compensation declined in 30 of 33 counties.
- The health care and social assistance sector accounted for the largest share of total compensation at 13.4 percent.
- Average annual compensation per job increased in 60 of 67 counties, as a decline in employment more than offset the decrease in compensation. Fairfield County, Connecticut had the highest average compensation at $92,435, while Essex County, Vermont had the lowest average compensation at $36,428.

Largest Counties in the New England region by 2009 Total Compensation (millions of dollars)

County	Total Compensation in 2008	Total Compensation in 2009	Percent Change
Middlesex, Massachusetts	67,780	66,102	-2.5
Suffolk, Massachusetts	56,594	54,095	-4.4
Fairfield, Connecticut	43,126	40,229	-6.7
Hartford, Connecticut	37,597	36,724	-2.3
New Haven, Connecticut	23,511	22,978	-2.3

BEA data—including GDP, personal income, the balance of payments, foreign direct investment, the input-output accounts, and economic data for states, local areas, and industries—are available on the BEA Web site: www.bea.gov. E-mail alerts are also available.